OPPORTUNITIES AND CHALLENGES IN CONSTRUCTING A PEACEFUL AND PROSPEROUS REGION: A JAPANESE PERSPECTIVE

The christening of the 21st century as the “Asian century” pays homage to the growing importance and role of Asia as a pillar of global power and wealth. However, the Asian century is not a forgone conclusion, nor is it inevitable. Peace and stability needs to be cultivated, strengthened and sustained for Asia to live up to its promise in scaling new heights of economic achievements and prosperity. How does Japan view the unfolding of the Asian century? How would the Abe Doctrine facilitate an Asian renaissance? What is Japan’s role and contribution to regional security?

Chief Executive, Institute of Strategic and International Studies (ISIS) Malaysia

Senior Parliamentary Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs,

UNDERSTANDING THE “NEW TYPE” OF MAJOR POWER RELATIONS: WHAT, HOW, WHY?

Establishing a “new type of relationship between major countries in the 21st century” has become a key plank in China’s foreign policy under President Xi Jinping. Yet the concept remains vague and thus subject to disparate interpretations. This session is aimed at exploring the core ideas, assumptions and expectations underlying this initiative. What might be the motivations and objectives behind the call for such a relationship? How would this new type of relationship manifest itself in the conduct of relations between China and the United States? How would this initiative impact relations between those major powers and ASEAN?

Institute of Asian Research & Liu Institute for Global Issues, The University of British Columbia, Canada

RESETTING SINO-JAPANESE RELATIONS

This forward-looking session will explore the practical steps that China and Japan can take to manage tensions, prevent miscalculations, and promote greater stability in their relationship. What would it take to restore regular high-level contact between Beijing and Tokyo? What realistic measures can the two countries adopt to moderate the intensity of their action-reaction dynamics in the East China Sea? What are the possible roles for regional platforms such as the ARF, the ADMM Plus, the ASEAN Plus Three and the East Asia Summit in helping to reset Sino-Japanese relations? More importantly, is a “reset” possible?

PLENARY SESSION 4

FOSTERING PEACE AND MANAGING SECURITY IN THE ASIA PACIFIC

Asia Pacific is at a crossroads. Economic prosperity has markedly improved lives and livelihood across the region, but peace is under pressure. Territorial disputes, competition for energy resources, the incipient major power rivalry and the erosion of strategic trust are threatening to undermine the progress of the Asian century. This session will discuss modalities to dampen and mitigate insecurities and distrust in the region. How can regional countries improve their military deterrence responsibly without causing a significant intensification of the security dilemma in the Asia Pacific? What kinds of restraints should countries adopt in their force development programmes? How can regional countries best adapt to and accommodate the growing military strengths of rising powers? Can security be attained by means other than military might? How does one begin to build trust?

MYANMAR'S POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC REFORMS

With few precedents for Myanmar's reforms and the context in which they are taking place, the trajectory of the country's political and economic developments remains hard to discern. This session will discuss the progress, challenges as well as the consequences – both intended and otherwise – of Myanmar's reform process. What are Myanmar's major foreign policy objectives? What significance and impact would Myanmar's chairmanship of ASEAN have on national politics? What have been the dividends from Myanmar's gradual liberalisation of its economy? How has the country sought to manage the relations between its many ethnic groups? What is needed to sustain the momentum behind the country's reforms? What role can ASEAN and its dialogue partners play to assist and support Myanmar's reform agenda?

TÊTE-À-TÊTE

INDONESIA DECIDES: NEW POLITICAL LANDSCAPE, NEW DIRECTIONS?

With elections taking place in 2014, profound changes are in store for Indonesia. The successor to President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono – who has been at the nation's helm for almost ten years – will assume the leadership of a country that has become increasingly influential and confident on the international stage. This tête-à-tête session will examine Indonesia's political landscape following its national and regional legislative polls in April and in the lead-up to presidential elections in July. What kinds of policies and approaches to governance will have the most traction under Indonesia's new and emerging political configurations? What might be the probable points of emphasis in Indonesia's foreign policy over the next five years?

Moderator: Tan Sri Rastam Mohd Isa
Chief Executive, Institute of Strategic and International Studies (ISIS) Malaysia

Speakers: Dr. Rizal Sukma
Executive Director, Centre for Strategic and International

PLENARY SESSION 6
ASEAN'S POST-2015 AGENDA: STRENGTHENING AND DEEPENING
COMMUNITY-BUILDING

Even beyond the 31 December 2015 target for establishing an ASEAN community, significant scope will remain for the organisation and its member states to strengthen their community-building efforts. This session seeks to identify the steps that ASEAN needs to take to add substance to its nascent community in the medium term after 2015. Do ASEAN member states truly have a common conception of what an ASEAN community should look like? What are the prerequisites for building a deeper and more mature form of community in ASEAN? What should ASEAN's priorities be in the five-year period beyond 2015?

BEYOND TERRITORIALITY: MANAGING THE MARITIME COMMONS
IN THE SOUTH CHINA SEA

Conflicting territorial and maritime claims are expected to remain a persistent and uncomfortable fact in the South China Sea. This session will therefore examine how the region – and particularly the claimant states – could address common security challenges in the absence of a resolution to those competing claims. How can a maritime regime be built to promote coordinated efforts in tackling transnational crimes such as piracy and the smuggling of people and goods, as well as threats to the maritime environment, such as overfishing and oil spills? What are the guidelines required to prevent maritime incidents involving civilian enforcement vessels, warships, military aircraft and research vessels in the South China Sea? Are there mechanisms to ensure navigational safety and to coordinate search and rescue (SAR) missions in the area? What are the potential consequences of insufficient cooperation in managing the maritime commons in the South China Sea?

PLENARY SESSION 8
IS JAPAN BACK?

Apart from gradually breaking away from its two decades of lacklustre economic growth and political instability, Japan has clearly become more forthright in pursuing its national interests. This session is aimed at examining the profound shifts in Japan's domestic and foreign policies. What has been the progress in implementing Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's "three arrows" for Japan's economic revival? What are the implications of "proactive pacifism" and a stronger Japan Self-Defence Forces (JSDF), both for the region at large, and for Japan's relations with the United States and China? What are likely to be the main elements of Japan's strategy in Asia in the near term?

THE DYNAMICS OF INDIA'S RISE: NATIONAL IMPERATIVES AND INTERNATIONAL ASPIRATIONS

India's rise as a major power is often treated as a forgone conclusion. Yet, the country continues to face a myriad of economic, social and developmental challenges, which have often been compounded by a byzantine bureaucracy and a complex political system. This session will examine the catalysts for, and obstacles to, India's rise as a major power. How will New Delhi seek to promote sustained, long-term growth for the Indian economy? How will it manage religious and communal relations in the country? What has been the role of India's states in the country's rise? How will India seek to assert its influence in the global arena over the next ten years? How will India utilise its growing military – and particularly naval – power in support of its foreign policy?

THE FUTURE OF THAI POLITICS

Despite winning every election since 2001, the government in Thailand has faced persistent challenges to its legitimacy from an influential section of the population. This session will seek to develop a greater understanding of Thailand's political trajectory and its seemingly interminable cycles of political instability. What is the future of Thai democracy? What has been the role of the media and state institutions such as the military, the courts and the National Anti-Corruption Commission in the current political stalemate? What are the roots of Thailand's political divide which has, among others, led to the ouster of Yingluck Shinawatra as prime minister? What led to the declaration of martial law on 20 May? What is needed to bring greater stability to Thai politics?
